

Dennis Clark, PGA Master Professional

Dennis Clark, a native of the Philadelphia area, is recognized as one of the top teaching professionals in the United States. For over 30 years, Dennis has taught thousands of golfers of all levels across the country. As both the Director of Golf and Instruction at several high end facilities, his work has been recognized by the PGA of America and several leading golf publications. A lifetime student of golf swing techniques as well as the history of the game, Mr. Clark's PGA Master Professional status is a distinction shared by less than two percent of all PGA Professionals.

Dennis is also a nationally respected author with over 4 million readers in his golf blog at <http://www.golfwrx.com/author/dennisclark/>.

GolfWRX is the largest online golf community in the world, and Clark has been a senior instructional author for over 5 years.

"My philosophy is simple: no two golf swings are alike, consequently no two golf lessons should be. I try to get my students to be their own teacher by understanding how their ball flight is the result of certain impact conditions and these are all corrected individually. There is no swing that cannot be corrected if one is willing to work on it."

Dennis Clark, 67, is a resident of Naples Florida.
